1990 The recently completed 10-year study, Environmental Health in the United States, is a landmark report by the National Academy of Sciences. It is the first comprehensive review of the environmental health issues that have been raised by the public and the media in the past decade. The report is a landmark because it is the first time that the National Academy of Sciences has taken on the task of reviewing the environmental health issues that have been raised by the public and the media in the past decade.
